AMERICA AND ARMENIA

NOW that the full report of the American committee on Armenia has been made public there can be no further doubt that the Turks are perpetrating the foulest and most colossal crime in their own black history. What Ambassador Morgenthau has stated and Viscount Bryce has repeated concerning the plight of the Christian people of Asia Minor is confirmed in this report and made a thousand times more emphatic by the publication of eye-witness descriptions of some of the details of these monstrous, wholesale massacres. It is impossible to read unmoved this record of grisly horror and inhuman cruelty. History records nothing to equal it.

Our government is moved by these disclosures and the enormous crime against humanity which they reveal and it has served notice on the sultan that "unless these massacres cease friendly relations between the American people and the people of Turkey will be threatened." This is very mild language compared with the atrocious crimes that are being committed against the helpless Armenians.

The American public is asked to give to the relief fund that is being raised for the Armenians so that some lives may be saved and some at least of those who have been driven from their homes repatriated. American generosity that has been equal to the numerous demands that were made upon it since this war began will not fail in such a cause. If American dollars can save Christian lives or alleviate the misery of persecuted Christians, American dollars will be forthcoming.

But can mere charity in such a case be more than a palliative, a rather mild sort of palliative that is infinitesimal in proportion to the evil to be cured? A million and a half of people are menaced by this latest Turkish outbreak. Almost a third are dead already, and if America must buy the lives and safety of the rest it is to be feared that but few can be saved.

Charity alone cannot avail; neither can mere formal expressions of indignation or regret. An appeal by the neutral Christian nations to Germany to stay the hand of her barbarous ally might stop further massacre, but that appeal, suggests the Philadelphia Press, must be official and it must be emphatic. The United States of America, as the greatest of the neutral nations and the professed champion of humanity, owes it to its own conscience and noble traditions to make immediate and vigorous representations to Germany and to Austria as well as to Turkey to stop this wanton slaughter before the Armenian Christians are entirely exterminated.

SPEAKING OF APICES

AN APEX case was tried in Tonopah not long ago and one of the vitally interested parties remarked: "Oh, shucks; if you want to find the real apex of all the lodes in Tonopah, just sashay out a little beyond the ball park." Time may prove that he had the right idea. The ledges of Tonopah were formed subsequent to the terrific volcanic activity of Mt. Brougher and they were deposited in fissures that followed an easterly and westerly course. Then the major portion of the volcano was eroded away, to give alibi for its thoughtless deeds, after it had covered the fissures with a subsequent flow of lava. Later there occurred a series of faults, throwing the eastern portion of the mineralized zone to the southward and in reassembling itself, nature got in some vertical action, finally reuniting its broken fragments and allowing the secondary enrichment waters to infiltrate and deposit and knit everything together again.

DAWSON IS DWINDLING

WORD comes that Dawson City has dwindled to a population of less than 2,000. There are in Tonopah many men and some women and children who were there in the good glad days when 25,000 people filled the buildings and the streets, when people basked in the midnight sun and never thought of bed or sleep, when the darkness grew as the orb of day approached Capricorn and the lights were lit all of the twenty-four hours and it was as it was in Creede, when they sang: "If the sun were only an arc light."

It is sad to see a ghost city in a lone land. Let's send Charley Van Loan up to add a mile to its population.

DRIFTING ON ORE

An upraise is being put up 100 feet south of the shaft from the 1000-foot level of the Monarch Pittsburg. At 91 feet the raise cut a stringer only a few inches wide, but which carried high values. A drift intermediate was started this morning on the ore. Other but smaller stringers run parallel to it.
